PREFACE

The Kansas Judicial Branch has passed another milestone in its history. During fiscal year 1979, the state began issuing pay warrants for all nonjudicial employees of the District Court. Thus, all state court employees were brought under a single, personnel classification and pay plan developed and administered by the judiciary. A description of the effort to establish this system is contained within.

This marks the second year of publication of the annual report in this format. Comparison of data in this document with data in the fiscal 1978 report can be made with only minimal caution. Comparison with prior years, however, should be made very carefully and only on a limited basis, because of the changes in both court structure and caseload reporting mechanisms.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE KANSAS JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The establishment of a judicial system predated Kansas' statehood by seven years. In 1854, while Kansas was still a territory, a supreme court and three district courts were established. The advent of statehood, in 1861, brought no structural change to the system. But in 1895, a court of appeals was established by an act which also provided for its expiration in 1901. The court, in fact, did pass out of existence and for the next sixty years there was no significant alteration of the framework of the state court system. During this period, there were established separate county courts of limited jurisdiction which handled probate, juvenile, minor civil, misdemeanor and traffic cases; throughout much of the state, justices of the peace administered the law.

The first major changes to the system occurred in the mid-1960's. The Office of Judicial Administrator was established in 1965 to assist the Supreme Court in exercising its administrative and supervisory responsibilities over the judicial system. In 1968, justices of the peace were abolished and their jurisdiction transferred to county courts. At that time, in most counties the functions of the probate, juvenile and county courts were consolidated under one judge. There were also in existence certain city courts, called by various names, which were of county-wide jurisdiction.

The rate of change accelerated after 1970, as efforts to modernize the court system gained momentum. In 1972, a new judicial article of the Kansas constitution was adopted. It brought many improvements, paving the way for unification of the trial courts and permitting again the establishment of a court of appeals. A citizen's study committee was appointed in 1973 for the purpose of examining the judicial system and recommending changes to implement fully the judicial article.

The work of this committee ultimately resulted in the unification of the state's trial courts in January, 1977. Probate, juvenile and county courts were abolished, as were the city courts of county-wide jurisdiction. The jurisdictions of these courts were consolidated into the district court. At the same time, the Court of Appeals was established to aid the Supreme Court in the handling of its appellate caseload.

The structural unification of the trial court precipitated still another major change. In 1978, the legislature authorized the initiation of state funding of the personnel costs of nonjudicial employees of the district courts. The legislation enacted laid out a program of gradual take-over by the state of the full payment of these salaries. The first phase began in January, 1979, when the state took over the issuance of pay warrants for all nonjudicial employees. During the assumption period, counties will pay back to the state a gradually decreasing proportion of district court personnel salaries. Full state funding will begin July 1, 1981, when the counties no longer will be required to remit any portion of these personnel costs.

THE COURTS OF KANSAS

The Kansas Constitution provides that there shall be one court of justice divided into a supreme court, district courts and other courts as provided by law. Statutory provisions which took effect in January, 1977, established a court of appeals as an intermediate appellate court. These three courts constitute the unified state judicial system. Municipal courts exist as entities of the cities which establish them, but they have jurisdiction over ordinance violations only and, therefore, are not state courts. The constitution provides the supreme court with administrative authority over all courts in the state.

The Supreme Court

The Supreme Court is Kansas' highest court. It consists of seven justices, each of whom is selected by the governor. He appoints from a list of three qualified individuals submitted to him by the supreme court nominating commission. After the first year in office, a justice is subject to a retention vote in the next general election. If a majority of electors votes to retain the justice, he or she remains in office for a term of six years. Justices are subject to a similar retention vote at the conclusion of each term.

The justice who is senior in terms of continuous service is designated by the constitution as the chief justice, unless he declines or resigns the position. The chief justice exercises the administrative authority of the Supreme Court. It is his responsibility to implement and carry out the administrative rules and policies established by the court.

The Supreme Court is provided by the constitution with original jurisdiction in proceedings in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus. Its jurisdiction over direct appeals in criminal cases is limited to those involving the two most serious classes of felony or life imprisonment. Its appellate jurisdiction also extends to any case in which a Kansas or United States statute has been declared unconstitutional. The Court has discretionary power of review over decisions of the Court of Appeals, and may transfer cases from one court to the other. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the admission and discipline of attorneys. It also may retire, discipline, suspend, or remove for cause judges who fail to observe the Code of Judicial Conduct.

The Court of Appeals

The Court of Appeals is an intermediate appellate court. It consists of seven judges, each appointed in the same manner as Supreme Court justices. The same nominating commission serves for both courts. Court of Appeals judges must stand for retention election after the first year in office and, thereafter, at the conclusion of each four-year term. The chief judge of the Court is appointed by the Supreme Court.

The Court of Appeals sits in panels of three judges as well as en banc. Although Topeka is designated as the site of the Court's principal offices, it is authorized by statute to hear oral arguments in any county courthouse in the state. In the interest of expediting the disposition of its caseload and in consideration of the sources of cases and other factors, the court travels extensively. Therefore, the three-judge panel is used frequently.

The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction over all appeals from the district court except those reviewable in the district court and those in which direct appeal to the Supreme Court is required. It has exclusive jurisdiction over the review of orders or decisions of the State Corporation Commission in public utility rate cases. Writs of habeas corpus also may be prosecuted in the Court of Appeals. The Court may request the transfer to the Supreme Court of any case before it.

The District Court

Since the unification of the courts in January, 1977, there have been no state courts of limited or special jurisdiction. The state has a single trial court of general jurisdiction, the District Court. It is a court of record exercising both original jurisdiction over civil and criminal matters and limited appellate jurisdiction.

There are three types of judges of the District Court. District judges exercise the full power and authority of the Court. Associate district judges have jurisdiction similar to that of district judges, except that they lack jurisdiction over class actions and actions in quo warranto or mandamus. District magistrate judges have jurisdiction over probate and juvenile matters, misdemeanors, felony preliminary examinations and certain civil actions involving amounts of $3,000 or less ($5,000, effective 7/1/79). The decisions of a district magistrate judge are appealable within the district court. Appeals from decisions of district or associate district judges, except in small claims cases, go to the appellate courts.

The state is divided into twenty-nine judicial districts, comprising from one to seven counties. There are seven single-county districts and twelve districts of five or more counties. There is at least one district judge in each district, but not all districts have associate district and district magistrate judges. As of June 30, 1979, there were 70 district, 65 associate district, and 76 district magistrate judgeships in the state.

Judges of the District Court are selected in one of two ways. In twenty-two districts, the voters have approved nonpartisan selection of judges by a district nominating commission with appointment by the Governor. A judge thus appointed must stand for retention election after one year in office. If a majority of votes cast favors his or her retention, the judge then serves a full four-year term. Thereafter, he or she is subject to a retention vote at the conclusion of each four-year term.

In the remaining seven districts, judges run for office on a partisan ballot. Judges so elected serve terms of four years.

KANSAS JUDICIAL DISTRICTS

ADMINISTRATION OF THE COURTS

The Kansas Constitution provides the Supreme Court with "general administrative authority over all courts in this state." In exercising this authority, the Court establishes the rules and policies governing the administration of the judicial system.

The chief justice serves as the administrative head of the system. As such, his supervisory responsibilities extend to all aspects of system management. He is empowered by statute to delegate his responsibility and authority as necessary to insure the smooth and efficient operation of the system.

The statutes further provide that the Court and each justice may have additional powers and duties prescribed by law. The Judicial Department Reform Act of 1965 divided the judicial districts into departments. Currently, there are six, each of which is assigned to a justice who is responsible for the supervision of all administrative activities within his or her department. Each is given the power to assign judges from one district to another and to require such reports as necessary to keep abreast of the business of the courts.

The management responsibility at the district level is placed with an administrative judge. Appointed by the Supreme Court from among the district judges in each district, the position is responsible for all clerical and administrative functions in the district. The administrative judge also manages the judicial caseload and directs the assignment of cases within his district.

The administrative structure of the court system places the responsibility for management at each level with judges. As a consequence, judges who fulfill these administrative roles have less time available to perform their adjudicative functions. Kansas has recognized the need for professional administrative staffs to aid judges in managing the system at both state and district levels.

Office of Judicial Administration

The Judicial Department Reform Act of 1965 created the position of Judicial Administrator who is appointed by and serves at the pleasure of the Chief Justice. The administrator is responsible for the implementation of the rules and policies of the Court as they apply to the operation and administration of the courts. Other duties may be prescribed by law or specified by the Court. The statutes provide that all state expenditures for district court operations be approved by the judicial administrator and, further, that all district court wage and salary claims to be paid by the state be certified by him.

The duties delegated to the Judicial Administrator by the Supreme Court have expanded his role beyond the relatively narrow statutory delineation. They include:

- examination of district court dockets and determination of need for judicial assistance;
- compilation of statistics on activities of all state courts and preparation of annual report;
- assessment of periodic need for interdistrict assignment of judges with appropriate recommendation to departmental justices;
- supervision and examination of administrative practices in district courts;
- administrative guidance to the district courts;
- preparation and administration of the budget under the direction of the Supreme Court;
- training of judicial and nonjudicial personnel;
- representation of the Court to the legislative and executive branches and to the public.

The staff of the Office of Judicial Administration performs its duties in the functional areas described in the following narrative:

Fiscal Operations

The Office of Judicial Administration is responsible for the administration of the budgeting, payroll, and general accounting activities of the Judicial Branch. Extensive liaison is maintained with executive branch agencies which cooperate in these endeavors. Other fiscal responsibilities include: inventory maintenance for the state office; financial record keeping for the appellate courts, the Appellate Clerk's Office, and other departments within the judicial system; and financial reporting for these offices.

During Fiscal 1979, a major new dimension was added to this operation with the assumption of the district court nonjudicial employees into the state judicial personnel and payroll system. This addition of approximately 1,200 employees mushroomed the fiscal responsibility of the office by several million dollars.

The state also funds a program to provide court-appointed counsel and other necessary legal assistance to poor persons who are charged with felonies. The Judicial Administrator is responsible for the administration of the expenditures for the program under the guidance of the Board of Supervisors of Panels to Aid Indigent Defendants. He certifies attorneys' claims for payment and authorizes payments as appropriate. Included in the program are public defender offices in three districts; funds are also provided to a nonprofit corporation which provides legal assistance to indigent inmates of correctional facilities. Total expenditures from the fund to Aid Indigent Defendants were $2,251,342 in FY 1979.

Personnel Management

The Office of Judicial Administration is responsible for managing the judiciary's statewide personnel system. The scope of this duty was expanded overwhelmingly during fiscal 1979 with the addition of the nonjudicial employees of the district court. An explanation of the process required to accomplish this task is provided in a subsequent segment of this report.

The responsibility for statewide coordination of the personnel function thus rests with this office. Specific duties include:

- recommending policy and procedures to the Supreme Court and implementing such as directed;
- establishing and maintaining position classifications;
- recruiting and screening applicants for state-level positions;
- providing assistance to district courts in recruiting and hiring;
- maintaining personnel records;
- insuring that equal employment opportunity and affirmative action policies are carried through.

Education and Training

The Office of Judicial Administration takes a major role in the development and coordination of training programs for court personnel. The focus of the training effort is on: improving judicial and administrative functions and procedures; interpreting statutory responsibilities and requirements; and improving individual skills and job performance.

The office aids in the development of major statewide conferences each year for judicial and nonjudicial personnel. In addition, seminars on special topics are conducted throughout the year for juvenile probation staff, court transcriptionists, court reporters, clerks, chief clerks and court administrators, municipal judges, administrative judges and other judges of the district court. An orientation program is presented for new judges. The staff also coordinates the out-of-state training activities of both judicial and other staff personnel.

The assimilation of courts of limited jurisdiction into the district court under unification brought with it a requirement for certification of nonlawyer judges by the Supreme Court. The Office of Judicial Administration provides the staff function for the committee of judges which has developed, and now maintains, a reference manual and the certification examination as required by the Court. Moreover, the administrator's staff coordinates specialized instruction for these judges and the administration of the examination.

Assistance to the Trial Courts

The Judicial Administrator has the responsibility for improving the management of the district courts in aid of the administrative judges of each district. The administrative assistance provided to the courts includes: analysis and development of improved managerial procedures and practices; maintenance of reference manuals; provision and analysis of information affecting court operations; revision of district court budget forms; and staff support in development of the court personnel rules. The recommendations for improvements in these areas take many forms, from memoranda to individual clerks to policy suggestions for administrative judges to proposed administrative orders of statewide application.

Compilation and Assessment of Court Caseload Information

The Judicial Administrator is charged with the responsibility for compiling statistical information and producing the annual report on court activity. In fulfillment of this obligation, his staff compiles annualized data for the appellate courts and administrates an extensive system for the reporting of all cases filed in the district court. This caseload reporting system constitutes a management information system, the primary uses of which are to:

- determine composition of caseload, as to type;
- determine whether caseload backlog exists and, if so, its composition;
- pinpoint and examine trends in filings and terminations;
- monitor age of pending cases;
- assess causes of delay in case disposition;
- forecast caseload;
- provide data on court workload;
- determine need for additional or fewer permanent personnel;
- determine need for temporary assignment of personnel from one court to another.

The clerk of the district court in each county is responsible for the accurate and timely reporting of all cases. The Office of Judicial Administration provides detailed instructions and conducts training sessions periodically to explain reporting procedures, answer questions, and solve problems. It also is responsible for the development, production, and distribution of various monthly and quarterly reports which provide management information for the administrative staff, district administrators, clerks, judges, and justices.

Trial Court Administration

To aid in managing district court activities, administrative judges are empowered by the Supreme Court to appoint either chief clerks or trial court administrators. Of the twenty-nine districts, seven are served by trial court administrators, with the remaining twenty-two served by a district court clerk who has been designated as chief clerk. In either case, it is the duty of the holder of that position to assist the administrative judge in carrying out the nonjudicial functions of the court.

Four of the seven administrators are located in the four largest counties, which are themselves districts. The fifth is employed in a district comprising two counties, and the remaining two administrators are in five-county districts. In general, court administrators are expected to have professional training in the field of management and their deployment through the system thus far has been limited to those districts which have felt the strongest need for these abilities. Although the technical qualifications for chief clerk are not so restrictive, in many districts that position functions as a full-fledged administrator. Chief clerks and trial court administrators are the focus for many of the requirements placed on the district courts by the Supreme Court. It is largely they who bear the responsibility, under the direction of the administrative judge, for managing day-to-day court operations at the local level.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A STATEWIDE JUDICIAL PERSONNEL SYSTEM

In addition to the ongoing administrative functions performed by the staff of the Office of Judicial Administration, a major effort during fiscal 1979 was devoted to the development of a personnel system for all the employees of the district court. On February 1, 1979, under legislation enacted in 1978, the state began issuing pay warrants to nonjudicial employees of the district court. Effective July 1, 1979, they were brought under the personnel classification and salary plan that had been developed during the previous year.

The establishment of the plan was a time-consuming process which began in mid-1977. To begin implementation of legislation passed in 1977, the Supreme Court brought in consultants to aid in the establishment of job descriptions, a classification and pay plan, and a set of personnel rules for state-level employees. In January, 1978, a total personnel plan for these workers was adopted by the Court.

The legislature in its 1978 session, in response to a consultant report which it commissioned, enacted statutes mandating that the nonjudicial personnel of the district court be brought into a comprehensive state judicial personnel system. Recognizing the need for special expertise, the Court again sought outside help in the form of a consultant team. This team put together a set of recommendations with regard to personnel policy and procedure and a time schedule for accomplishing the personnel takeover. The Court also expanded its own personnel committee so that it might deal more adequately with the question of how district court employees would be covered by the personnel rules.

The process of classifying employees for eventual enrollment in the new system began during fiscal 1978. Each district court employee was asked to complete a position classification questionnaire in which the duties and responsibilities of his position, as well as the court's chain of supervision, were to be described. These questionnaires provided the foundation on which the personnel system was built. The initial steps of formulating the pay plan to be dovetailed with the personnel classification plan were begun early in fiscal 1979. Desk audits of nonjudicial positions throughout the state were conducted using court administration specialists hired on temporary basis and in-house staff. These audits were used with the questionnaires to establish tentative job classifications and pay grades for all nonjudicial employees.

Trial court administrators, chief clerks and, in some cases, administrative judges met with staff members to review classifications and to provide information with regard to individual salary levels. Upon completion of the review of the classifications, job specifications for individual positions were refined and necessary adjustments to the overall classification plan were made. At this stage, the process of fitting the tentative salary schedule to the plan was completed. A revised version of the Kansas Court Personnel Rules which incorporated district court nonjudicial employees also was adopted. As mandated by law, the Supreme Court submitted to the legislature its detailed classification and pay plan for these district court employees.

For the period from January 1 through June 30, nonjudicial employees were paid by the state at their calendar year 1978 rates. This began the first phase of the state takeover of the payment of these salaries. During this time, an intensive training and informational effort was undertaken to prepare both judges and their employees for the employees' entrance into the state judicial personnel system. The staff of the Office of Judicial Administration also examined the district court personnel and payroll listings in an attempt to ensure the highest possible degree of compliance with the law in regard to the state takeover of salaries. As the result of this administrative effort spanning nearly two years, the Kansas Judicial Branch entered Fiscal 1980 with an efficient personnel and payroll system which covered all state court employees.

THE APPELLATE COURTS

The Appellate Courts

Because of the establishment of the Court of Appeals in January, 1977, and the attendant changes in appellate practice, comparisons of caseload data across that point in time are limited. Comparisons of fiscal year 1978 and 1979 data can be made readily.

Below is a table showing combined appellate court caseload, including original actions, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1979. Comparing these figures with those from fiscal 1978 reveals an increase in appellate court activity. In fiscal 1979, 970 cases were commenced in both courts, an increase of 3% of the fiscal 1978 total of 944. The total number of cases disposed of rose much more significantly--22%, from 772 dispositions in 1978 to 940 in 1979. Also significant was the growth in number of opinions rendered. In fiscal 1978, there were 571 cases disposed of by opinion. In fiscal 1979, this figure rose to 680, an increase of 19%.

THE DISTRICT COURT

THE CASELOAD INFORMATION SYSTEM

The unification of the state trial courts in January, 1977, necessitated major revisions to the caseload reporting mechanisms in use at that time. There had been separate systems for the district courts and for the limited and special jurisdiction courts. Effective July 1, 1977, a new set of forms was implemented for the reporting of all cases filed in the district court. Procedures for use of these forms retained the diversity based on case type that had been in existence under the former court structure.

There have been no major changes to the caseload information system since 1977. General jurisdiction cases are reported within the segment of the system which uses a computer to store and summarize data. This segment may be described as transaction-based, in that the reporting information on an individual case is triggered by specific events in the life of that case--its filing or disposition. Cases reported in this manner include all non-traffic criminal cases, all regular civil cases, including domestic relations actions, and all limited civil actions, excluding small claims. (Limited civil actions are those involving amounts of $3,000 or less and using the code of civil procedure for limited actions. Effective July 1, 1979, the jurisdictional amount was raised to $5,000.)

The second segment of the caseload information system relies entirely upon manual processes. Generally, it is the special jurisdiction cases which are reported and summarized in this segment. The reporting forms, prepared quarterly, are summaries of individual case types. Twenty cases are reported per form and certain information is provided about each case both on filing and on termination. Cases reported within this segment are: formal juvenile cases, probate cases of all types, small claims, traffic cases, and other miscellaneous cases.

The statistical tables containing district court data constitute the bulk of this annual report. The tables comprise information from both segments of the caseload reporting system. General information on all types of cases has been provided. However, much editing has been done and the complete statistical detail available is portrayed in only a few tables which depict statewide caseload activity.

Last year marked the first revision of the annual report in more than a decade. This year's report has not been changed significantly in format from that for fiscal year 1978; but the same caveats regarding the data apply. The modifications to the report formats and statistical portrayals, when coupled with the changes which occurred in the judicial branch and in the caseload information system in calendar year 1977, limit the comparability of the two most recent annual reports with those from previous years. Reasonable comparisons between fiscal year 1978 and fiscal year 1979 data may be made, but any comparison with prior years should be made with extreme caution.

DOMESTIC RELATIONS AND OTHER REGULAR CIVIL CASES FILED STATEWIDE FY 74-79

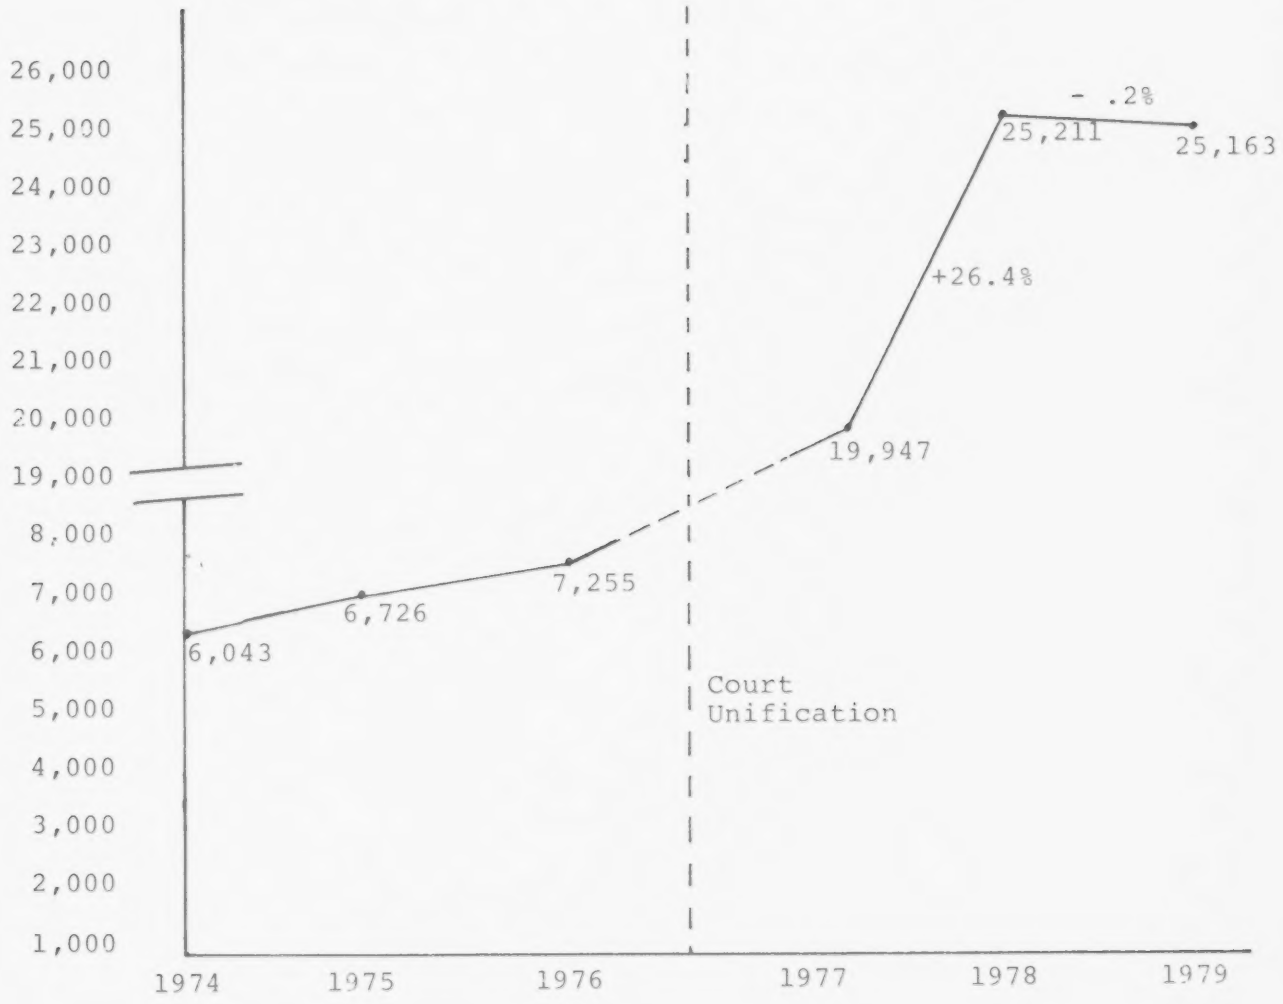
The graph above depicts total annual domestic relations and other regular civil cases filed in the district court for fiscal 1979 and the preceding five fiscal years. Only these civil cases are shown because the method of reporting them has not been changed and, therefore, comparability is relatively unaffected by external change. The trend in filings of these cases has moved steadily upward at an average annual growth rate of 4.7% since fiscal 1974. The increase from fiscal 1978 to fiscal 1979 was 6.1%.

CRIMINAL CASES FILED STATEWIDE FY 74-79



This graph depicts total criminal cases filed in the district court for fiscal years 1974 through 1978. It is presented, in part, to demonstrate the dramatic effect of court unification on the number of criminal cases filed in the district court. Prior to unification, most misdemeanor cases were filed in special jurisdiction courts; also, most felony cases were taken through the preliminary hearing phase at that lower level. Consequently, most criminal cases did not rise to the district court level and, thus, were not counted as district court filings. Since January, 1977, all criminal cases are filed originally in the district court. This structural change makes it difficult to assess trends since unification. Because the change occurred in the middle of the fiscal year, the 26.4% increase from 1977 to 1978 demonstrated above cannot be termed real. A comparison between fiscal 1978 and 1979, however, is valid and shows a decrease of 0.2%.
